PERMANENT HIGHWAYS ARE MYTHICAL

UNCLE SAM'S INFORMS PUBLIC HARD SURFACE ROADS HIT

To Keep Them Continuously In Good Order, It Is Necessary to Start Maintaining It the Day the Construction Is Completed—Improved Roads Are Not Luxuries.

The department of agriculture warns the people that when they speak about permanent highways they talk about something that never existed and never will exist.

A common mistake, says the department, "is the idea that there is such a thing as a permanent road. This delusion has been responsible for much disregard of road maintenance, one of the state highway departments however, any longer harbors this error. It is now thoroughly understood by those public agencies that all roads of type, gradually deteriorate and wear out under the wheels of vehicles and the action of the weather. To keep a road in continuously good order, it is necessary to start maintaining it the day its construction is completed."

Another common error, says the department, is that all roads should be hard-surfaced. On this interesting phase of the road building problem the department of agriculture expresses itself as follows:

"Hard-surfacing with concrete, brick asphalt, stone or wood blocks is an expensive process. When its cost is greater than the saving accruing from the improvement, hard surfacing is not advisable. It is possible to make great improvements in roads without hard surfacing them and these improvements are quite effective in reducing the cost of travel.

"When vehicles using a road are comparatively few, an unsurfaced but graded and drained road can be made and maintained at very low cost. If the traffic is so great that an unsurfaced road cannot be maintained in continuous good condition, surfacing with stone, sand-clay or gravel, although more costly than simple grading, will generally be compensated by the greater saving in the cost of operating vehicles over it. Similarly, when the traffic is greater than a gravel road will carry, a bituminous, macadam surface can be economically applied. It is not necessary to use one of the hard surfacing types until the traffic becomes very dense. When that point is reached, hard surfacing is necessary and economical.

All roads should be improved to the maximum degree that the traffic on them justifies, but no road should be improved beyond its earning capacity. When this principle is observed, the savings in the cost of operating the vehicles it has to carry. In other words, the return to the public in the form of economic transportation is the sole measure of the worth or road improvement. To say that all roads should be hard surfaced is merely another way of urging expenditures in excess of income."

Improved roads, the department says are not luxuries.

"For the movement of every vehicle over a road there is a certain cost," the department adds, "which is less if the road be improved than if it be left in a state of nature. Logically, therefore, the only limit that should be placed on expenditure for road improvement is the amount that can be saved in vehicular operating costs. This depends, of course, upon the number of vehicles using the road. It is pointed out that the country loses more in increased cost of operating vehicles by not improving roads than it costs to improve them.

LIQUOR LAW VIOLATORS SENTENCED

Cleveland, O., June 20 (U.P.)—In passing sentence on the Hayner whisky conspirators today Federal Judge D. C. Westenhaver said:

"On an occasion like this I do not see fit to lecture the defendants. I will sentence Russell to two years imprisonment on the first count (conspiracy to violate the prohibition law) and impose a fine of $7,500 and sentence him to two years on the second count, (conspiracy to violate the internal revenue law) to run concurrently.

"As to Barnett, his sentence will be the same.

"But as to Copeland, I have some difficulty. I am not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that he was not an underpaid substitute. I will have some regard for his final position."

He was given two years imprisonment and $2500 fine.

The judge then went on down thru the list, defense attorneys occasionally interrupting to ask for leniency.

DEATH CALLS U. S. SENATOR EDWIN F. LADD

COMPLETION OF FRANKLIN PAVED STREET

Paving of Franklin street was finished to the east line of Mingo street Saturday afternoon. All that is left to be done is the pouring of asphalt and going over a few rough places on the street and curb.

The work on the street shows what a live organization like the contractors, The W. H. Ringwald & Sons company, of Chillicothe, can accomplish with real road machinery, experience and organization behind them. The work of excavation was begun April 12, the paving was commenced five weeks ago and this would have been completed earlier had not the firm been held up in the shipment of asphalt.

GASOLINE TAX PRODUCES BIG SUM OF MONEY

Every Day $30,000 Reaches State's Coffers—Small Cost for Operation.

Despite efforts still being made to have the gasoline tax law set aside, the law was operative and is running smoothly. Based on an estimate of the volume of consumption of gasoline in the state, it is figured that $30,000 are trickling into the coffers of the state every day as revenue from this source.

It was said when the act was under consideration that the collection of the tax would be a complicated and difficult affair. The fact, however, is that the state auditor, treasurer and tax commission in addition to their regular duties with the assistance of one new official stenographer and a stenographer who are domiciled in an outer office of the state tax commission are taking care of the revenue collecting.

Later it may be necessary to have some traveling auditors visit the filling stations to check up on the reports of sales. The state will have the records of the refineries and large oil companies to use in this check so that it is not likely that any attempts will be made on the part of the dealers to "beat" the tax.

It has been predicted that with the enforcement of the gasoline tax law the gasoline bootlegger would develop but with such a small rake-off to be obtained—two cents on the gallon, the risk would be too great for that. As long as the profit to be made in rum running is so large and the risk is greater than it has been up to this time, it would seem unlikely that the clandestine selling of gasoline would be attractive to anyone minded to make money that way.

Stage construction of gravel roads is to have precedence over expensive hard surfaced highway improvements during the next two years of the Donahay administration, it developed Saturday, as a result of Governor Donahay's pronouncement relative to the use of the gasoline tax revenue for gravel roads only.

The governor's message was directed to Highway Director Boulay and his 11 division engineers, and suggested that the gas tax money could be put to a more profitable use on stage construction than on improving and widening the expensive hard surface system.

Since Director Boulay's term of office expires August 10, and he is to be succeeded by someone more in accord with the governor's policies, it is safe to suppose that the new highway director, whoever he may be will heartily support the gravel road program and will minimize the improvement of hard surface road to the advantage of the gravel highways. Expansion of the state system by use of gravel is to be the policy of the Donahay administration, according to present indications.

Potato's Importance

The potato is one of the many valuable gifts of America to the world. Most histories, busy chronicling wars and elections and perhaps inventions, fail to emphasize the introduction of the potato from America to Europe, or else mention it quite incidentally. Economists and sociologists, however, could make a good case for the potato as the New world product which has most deeply affected life in the old world.

The Clue to His Door-Mat

By JAMES F. DWYER

WNU Service

IT WAS midnight. In Fifth avenue there were few pedestrians, and a fat man in evening dress hurrying northward, attracted attention. Six night birds, who thought his actions mysterious, followed a few paces in the rear.

At Thirty-second street a policeman, dozing on the opposite side of the road, straightened himself as he saw the hurrying group coming towards him. Swinging his night stick he crossed over and waited the approach of the little procession.

The Law was a trifle astonished. As he stood looking after the leader of the hurrying squad, he was jostled by the inquisitive ones following, and he became annoyed. He grabbed a straw-hatted youth by the shoulder and questioned him.

"What's the matter?" he cried.

"Search me," answered the questioned one. "Le'me go; I want to see what the ole guy is up to."

The policeman lost his temper. He was being treated with disrespect. A festive citizen was running a fool procession over his beat without giving him the least explanation! So he let go of the youth's shoulder and dashed madly after the man in evening dress.

"Here, what's the game?" he panted. "What sort of a stunt are you up to, anyhow?"

The fat man shook off the grip of the Law and ran faster than ever, his outstretched hands circling round each other like the arms of a windmill in a gale.

"Stoop down and I'll tell you," he gasped, as the officer made another effort to restrain him.

"Been doin' that all the way from Twenty-eighth street," gasped the early followers, proud in the possession of that much information. "He's told the cop a joke, an' now the hickory wielder is hittin' the trail with him."

At Forty-eighth street the policeman met the officer on the adjoining beat, and hooking him by the arm he whispered into his ear as he kept pace with the fat man. The new policeman guffawed loudly, and again the angry crowd looked vainly for the humor that seemed apparent to the two guardians of the peace. The first policeman slackened speed, called out a friendly "Good luck" to the fat man, and then returned to his own beat, while his comrade trotted swiftly in his place.

The fat man swung east, down Fifty-third street, and new recruits joined the procession at every yard. But all hurried vainly for information. Questions put by the newcomers were met with the one answer: "Don't know; look at his hands. Been twisting them round and round all the way from Twenty-eighth street."

Crossing Third avenue the fat man halted suddenly. He knelt down upon his car tracks, and the officer stooped beside him. The crowd pressed round till the swiftly-swung nightstick swept them back. The man in evening dress crawled across the tracks and raked the ground with his fingers.

Presently he leaped to his feet and yelled out excitedly: "It's all right, officer," he cried, and once again his hands started to revolve round each other as he dashed towards the water.

Just here a third policeman was initiated into the mystery that was troubling the crowd, and with a merry laugh he took up a position by the side of the fat man. The crowd cursed collectively. Here was a mystery that had been explained three times to bulky policemen, yet they were kept in ignorance. It wasn't fair. They had a right to know why the man in evening dress was doing the windmill performance with his hands, and why that stunt amused the policeman. Much of their breath was exhausted in strange phrases denouncing the secrecy of the police, but they were determined to see the end.

Near Second avenue a man standing on the sidewalk turned when he heard the noise of the charging squad and contemplated the runners. Then he stepped into the street and crossed over. The fat man chuckled. He whispered to the policeman at his right hand, and the officer dashed ahead. The man in front started to run, but his pursuer overhauled him in a dozen strides, and they rolled on the pavement.

"Wot's the matter?" gasped the captured one. "Wot are yer scruffin' me for?"

"This gentleman wants his rubber door-mat," murmured the policeman, relieving his captive of the parcel he carried beneath his arm.

"Hully Gee!" exclaimed the prisoner, rubbing his eyes and staring round him at the crowd. "Where did yer get the mob, an' how did yer know I had it, anyhow?"

"I had you on a string," explained the fat man, holding up a black thread in the light of the street lamp. "I've caught five men who have tried to steal that mat. It's attached to a thousand yards of strong thread, and as they generally grab it when the streets are quiet, the trail is always clear."

Fence Post Puzzle Solved by Locust

Black Variety Grows Best on Alkaline or Sweet Soil.

The fence post problem, says Professor J. A. Cope, forester from the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, has become serious with the almost complete disappearance of chestnut in this country because of the blight.

A grape grower in Chautauqua county who uses hundreds of posts every year has solved this problem by the use of black locust. He found that he could grow suitable posts in 15 years, and further, that these posts would last 15 years after being set instead of the customary ten years expected of chestnut posts.

In addition, he has been able to get another crop of posts from sprouts in ten years, because of the great vigor of the locust tree.

As the black locust is really a legume, it grows best on a sweet or alkaline soil, and it is necessary to restrict plantings to such sites in order to make headway against the deadly locust borer.

In a trip to Chautauqua county, Professor Cope says that all the volunteer stands of locust which he examined showed evidences of attack by this beetle, but that on the better sites where there was a non-acid soil, the locust had grown enough to practically nullify the work of the borer.

Planting the locust with pine also helps to protect it against the borer, as the beetles like to fly around in the sunshine, and if the trunks can be kept in the shade, the beetles will not lay their eggs on them. Young white pines would certainly furnish the shade, and would also prevent the locust from making too many side branches, which are not desirable for posts. Such a mixed planting deserves trial.

Bad Practice Is Shown in Pasture Management

Romance and drama share their thunder with animal industry, plant culture, and forestry in a new United States Department of Agriculture motion picture, "The Green Barrier."

"The Green Barrier" is a two-reeler, punctuated with thrills. The Piney Woods of the South provide the locale and the story is built about the long-established but disastrous custom of burning the woods to "green up" pasture for cattle. The drama reaches its climax when a woods fire, started by one of the characters, gets beyond control, driven by a high wind. The flames spread to the farm dwelling, and while they are fighting frantically to save their home, the mother of the leading character is trapped in the woods by the fire.

The fallacy of firing the woods is forcefully brought out. The importance of fire-resisting carpet grass, lespedeza, and other highly nutritive pasture grass is stressed. The film also contains good sound lessons in pasture management and reforestation. "The Green Barrier" was photographed in southern Mississippi and contains many scenes of rare beauty.

Sex Quite Difficult to Determine Among Geese

Sex is difficult to distinguish in geese, particularly if the birds are young. The gander is usually somewhat larger than the goose and has a shrill cry, while the goose makes a coarser, lower noted call. The male has a heavier, longer neck and a larger head. Sex may better be determined by inspecting the sexual organs or during the mating season by observation. The splinter muscle, which closes the anus of the female is folded, and widening or sinuous if stretched, while a light pressure on the corresponding section of the male will make the sexual organ protrude.

One gander is usually mated with two or three females, and after mating allowed to run in flocks. Three to five years is best age.

FARM FACTS

Make plans now to treat potato seed with formaldehyde or corrosive sublimate.

Buy your spray pumps and materials early and be ready to start spraying at the proper time.

Plenty of bedding for the cows does three things—keeps them cleaner, provides more warmth, and saves more of the liquid parts of the manure.

Don't forget that pure seed showing a high percentage of germination is just as important to success in farming as pure-bred, high-producing live stock.

Give the brood sow plenty of exercise, clean, dry quarters, and a well-balanced ration, is the advice of swine extension workers of the state college.

Sweet clover may be sown in the spring, and if the soil is favorable for its growth you can get considerable hog pasture from it during the summer and fall.

Sweet clover may be sown the same as red clover is usually sown, except that it should be sown rather early, as it takes more moisture to germinate sweet clover seed than for red clover seed.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

George Kelly Is Best First Sacker

George Kelly, first baseman of the Giants, in the opinion of many players is one of the best first sackers of all time. His height, used in reaching for high or erratic throws, and his fielding and batting, make him valuable.

Astonishing Swat Was Cause of Small Riot

Lee Meadows caused a small riot on the Pirate bench the other day when he sent his now famous home run over the right-field wall. But as the pitcher ran around the sacks, his mates "framed" him. They decided to refrain from offering one word of praise for the astonishing swat.

Lee came in after his "dash" around the bases. Any player, especially a pitcher, expects laudatory remarks from his mates upon an occasion of this kind. Lee ran to the dugout where absolute silence prevailed. Meadows stood it for a minute or two and then broke loose.

"What in the devil's the matter here," he shouted. "Did you fellows think that smash was foul?"

ONE-BASE HITS

By JACK SIMPSON.

Balls Hitting Umpire.

The umpire has always been known as a necessary evil on a ball field and quite often is hit with a thrown or batted ball while following a play.

If before reaching a player a batted ball touches either the person or clothing of an umpire, the ball is not in play and the batter is granted first base, but no bases can be taken by any other base runners unless forced to do so by the batter becoming a base runner.

The ball is in play if it comes in contact with the umpire after it has passed through the infield and all base runners can advance at their own peril. A fairly batted ball that strikes the umpire while the latter is on foul ground is in play, his position having no effect on the ball. If a batted ball that is hit through the pitcher, or which the latter knocks down but does not hold, passes on and strikes the umpire, the ball is in play and the batter can be thrown out.

All thrown balls that hit the umpire are in play and base runners can get all the bases they can make. An umpire interfering with a catcher throwing to bases to catch runners must send all runners back to their original bases, as no runs can be scored or base runners advanced through this interference.

More Girls Are Taking to Big Athletic Events

More girls read the sports page than the society column, if the results of a recent industrial survey may be taken as a fair indication of present-day tendencies in this group. This anomaly, no doubt, is partly due to the active participation of women in the athletic events arranged everywhere for members of their sex.

The fact that big sporting events are generally topics of conversation in virtually all circles and the national absorption in baseball may be considered contributory causes. Intercollegiate and interclub athletic events also attract many women readers.

Horace Ford, second baseman of the Philadelphia Nationals, has been purchased by the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Garland Buckeye of the Cleveland Indians is the biggest pitcher in the major leagues. He weighs 240 pounds.

Catcher Hofmann of the New York Yankees has been purchased by the St. Paul club of the American association.

Bob Naylor, formerly with the Philadelphia Athletics, has been purchased by Manager Wade Killifer for the Seattle Indians.

The Brooklyn club has sent Pitcher Guy Cantrell, obtained from the Western association, to Jersey City of the International league.

Manager Nicholas Allen of the St. Paul club of the American association has prohibited the playing of golf by members of his team.

H. E. Heffmann of Detroit has not held his place in the leading five hitters of the American league to date, but he is coming back strongly.

Pitcher George B. Winn, left-hander, who was with Milwaukee last year, and who has been with Little Rock this season, has been obtained by Shreveport.

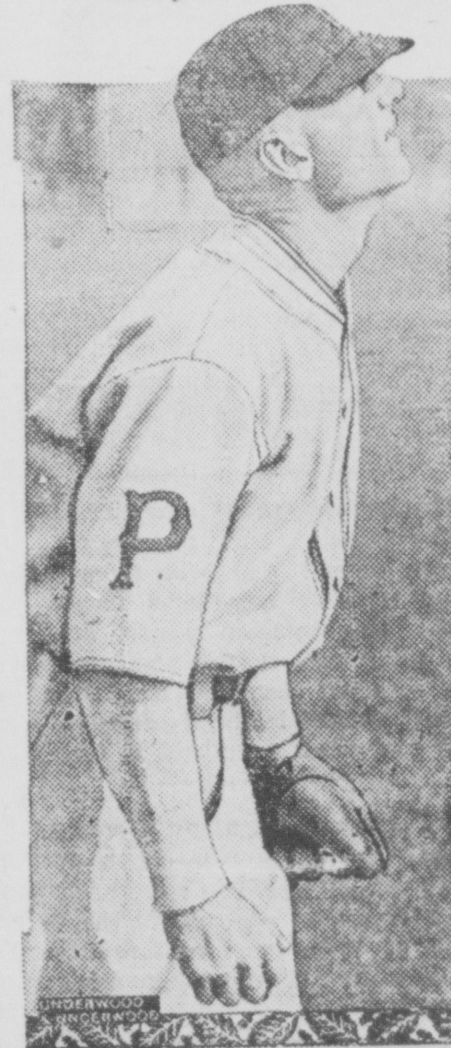

George Kopshaw, catcher, was sold by the Flint club of the Michigan Ontario baseball league to the Baltimore Orioles of the International league.

George Sisler's record of safe hitting came to an end when he failed to hit off Harris and Groves of the Athletics, after connecting in thirty-four games.

Jersey City has obtained on option Guy Cantrell, big right-handed pitcher from the Brooklyn Dodgers. The Dodgers got Cantrell from the Western association.

Third Baseman Goldie Rapp, held out on the Toledo American association team, has been purchased by Rochester. He is a veteran who has seen big-league service.

Carey Still a Star

Max Carey, veteran outfielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, continues to play in brilliant fashion. His hitting is as hard as ever and his speed on the bases is unusually good.

Pigeons Fly Far

Up to the year 1913, 800 miles was the record distance flown by any homing pigeon, but in that year a flight was organized between Rome and Derby, and a bird belonging to C. H. Hudson, a Derby fancier, arrived safely at its loft four weeks after being liberated in Rome. The distance exceeds 1,000 miles. Even this record has been exceeded by two birds which flew from Pensacola, Fla., to Fall River, Mass., a distance of 1,182 miles. The time taken was fifteen and a half days.—London Tit-Bits.

Wife Gave Him the Tip

Jones was an enthusiastic spectator at a big race. Having little knowledge of the sport, and being anxious to have a small bet, he looked over the list of runners until his eye rested on "Behave Yourself."

Jones was one of the few who won on the race.

"How did you happen to pick the winner?" asked a friend.

"I had an idea. 'Behave yourself,' was the last thing my wife said to me when I left home."

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Disappointed Them

"Ah Beenaway!" saluted Staidhome. "Of course, you had a good time back in your old home town visiting among old friends?" "I expected to have, but as soon as they found that I hadn't come to bring the town some big enterprise, like a light company or a new hotel, I didn't have any friends."—Kansas City Star.

Sun-Dried Oysters Eaten

In Mongolia sun-dried oysters are a common article of food and are sold in the market places. They are sold loose, in a wreath form, spitted on sticks of rattan or dried after being dried for hanging in stores. They are not so palatable as fresh oysters, but they are eaten either dried or stewed.

BEST ICE CREAMS
CONTAIN GELATINE

Not as Cheap Filler, But To Prevent
Crystallization, Says
Professor.

Gelatine is not put in commercial ice cream as a cheap filler. At the present time it is the most expensive constituent and is used to prevent water crystallization under low temperatures, according to a recent statement given out by the dairy department at Ohio State University.

"Gelatine is a constituent of ice cream that the consuming public knows little about," said Professor R. B. Stoltz in a radio talk from WEAO at the University. "The general impression among some people is that gelatine is added to cut down the cost of manufacture.

"As a matter of fact gelatine is used in your ice cream to prevent water of crystallization, and for that purpose the higher grades, which cost from 55 to 65 cents a pound, are most economical for the manufacturer to use, making gelatine one of the most expensive constituents of ice cream.

"It has not been many years ago when some manufacturers used gums and other colloids or stabilizers, and advertised to the consuming public that their ice cream contained no gelatine. This made the consuming public believe that the presence of gelatine in ice cream was a detriment and something to be shunned, and little has ever been done to correct this wrong impression."

In speaking of the mineral constituents of ice cream Professor Stoltz said that one-half pint of ice cream contains as much lime as one and one-half pounds of bread, four pounds of meat or three and one-third pounds of potatoes, and as much iron as four ounces of raisins.

M'MILLAN NAVY
POLAR EXPEDITION
SET SAIL TODAY

Wiscasset, Maine, June 20.—(U.P.)—Out of the peaceful little harbor of Wiscasset, with the cheers and good wishes of their countrymen ringing in their ears, the explorers of the McMillan-Navy Polar expedition will set sail this afternoon upon the most ambitious American attempt at Arctic conquest since Peary planted the Stars and Stripes at the top of the world 16 years ago.

Even before the tight little vessels "Peary" and "Bowdoin" weighed anchor, the State of Maine was disputing its right to claim sovereignty over any land the expedition might discover. Governor Brewster at a farewell dinner presented a State flag to McMillan and said:

"If you find land up there, we hope you will claim it on behalf of Maine."

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mrs. Lawrence Goodman entertained the "Thimble" club last Thursday afternoon at her beautiful country home near Kinderhook. Those present were Mrs. Stanley Glick and son, David, Mrs. Will Anderson and children, Virginia, Mary Erma and Allen, Mrs. Nelson Reid, Mrs. John Lammap, Mrs. John Hoffman and daughter, Helen, Mrs. Margaret Cullums, Mrs. Mabel Westenhaver and daughters, Eleanor and Marjorie, Mrs. Ben Court-right, Mrs. Robert Liston, Mrs. Mary McDill, Mrs. Earl Mossbarger and daughters, Martha and Doris, the hostess and daughters, Mary Belle and Jean Alys. The afternoon was spent in sewing, after which lunch was served, consisting of angel food cake, combination ice and iced tea.

Mr. William C. Hallisy, secretary of the Hooven and Allison company, and Miss Madge McKenzie, welfare nurse of the same company, were married at Holy Trinity church, by Rev. Father Herman Leising in Dayton, Wednesday, June 17. The ceremony was witnessed by friends of the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Hallisy returned to Xenia where they will reside.—Xenia Gazette.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Margaret McKenzie, of Pickaway town ship. Mrs. McKenzie and daughter, Miss Katherine, spent the week in Xenia and were in attendance at the wedding.

INDIAN SUPERSTITION

SAVES A LIFE.

The Indians had a place in what is now Pickaway county to which they brought many of their captives to be punished or put to death, where the spectacles were made entertainment for their people, and to that place after the burning of Colonel Crawford, one of his men who had been captured with the colonel, was brought to be burned. Undoubtedly this man, James Slover, was led thru Franklin county on the way to the "burning ground."

But he was saved by an accident and its effect upon the superstition of his captors. The afternoon when he was to have been thus put to death, when there was a vast concourse of Indians from far around on the hills overlooking the place where Slover was to be burned at the stake, brought a terrible storm accompanied by most unusual thunder and lightning. It was so severe that the Indians feared it was an expression of disapproval from the great spirit, of the proposed proceedings of the afternoon. Something like a referendum was taken as to whether to proceed or not.

The decision was against the captive, but by the time it had been arrived at, evening had come, and the burning was postponed to the next day. That night Slover was placed in a cabin, tied by thongs to a log and guarded by two Indians. Late in the night one of the Indians went to sleep and finally the other one also succumbed to fatigue and Slover took advantage of the situation to slip the thongs from his wrist and neck and got away. Going to the field where the Indians had tethered their horses he picked one that he considered the fleetest and by morning had placed so great a distance between him and his pursuers that he was not overtaken by them and eventually made his way to his home in Virginia.—J. H. Galbraith, blandbdo G h f dorfbmbz mbz mbz mb

CASE NOT DECIDED
BY HIGH COURT

Washington, June 19.—Among the important cases left undecided when the U. S. supreme court adjourned for its four-months' summer recess was that involving the question whether Mal Daugherty of Washington C. H., O., can be required to testify before senate investigating committee.

Daugherty, brother of former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, not only refused to testify before the committee headed by Senator Brookhart of Iowa, when it was investigating the Daugherty administration of the department of justice, but he obtained an injunction to examine the records of the bank of which he is president.

Federal Judge Cochran, sitting at Cincinnati, ruled that the senate lacked authority under the constitution and the resolution authorizing the investigation to compel witnesses to testify against their will.

WHITE DIARRHEA.
SAVE THEM

Ashville, Ohio, R. F. D. 1.
May 7, 1924.

Mr. Fickardt:—

I bought 400 chicks. Very soon the chicks began to die of WHITE DIARRHEA. My chicks kept on dying until I had lost 250 in two weeks.

At that time I had ten sick chicks and I really considered them as good as dead. I began to use your remedy with all my chicks, both well and sick. Eight of the sick chicks recovered and I have not lost any others since I began the use of Fickardt's Roup and Cholera Drops over a month ago.

I would have probably thought that disease had run its course, if it had not been for the fact that those that were sick recovered; but seeing the sick ones get well has convinced me that your remedy cured them.

STATE OF OHIO

Now Boasts Around a Million Electricity Users.

Columbus, June 19.—Ohio, forging steadily ahead in the electrical field, has around one million users of electricity furnished by central generating stations.

Statistics compiled by the Ohio Committee on Public Utility Information, from annual reports just issued by the Ohio Public Utilities Commission, show that on the first of this year there were 990,831 homes, commercial establishments and industrial plants using electric light and power in this state. This was an increase of 95,519 over the year before, or a monthly increase of 7060 customers. On the same basis of increase the number of consumers on the first of June would be around 1,030,631 in Ohio.

To meet this demand for increased electrical service, it was necessary to increase the investment in these light and power companies $44,865,056 during the year, bringing the total investment up to $360,508,699.92.

At the same time, these annual reports show, operating expenses were increased $44,926.22. The total operating expenses for the last year was $48,036,018.65. Taxes were increased by $287,751.56. The total amount of taxes paid during the year by these companies was $8,021,735.63. This means that every day in the year, Sundays and holidays included, the electric light and power industry paid more than $2,197 out in taxes.

A compilation of the reports shows a total of 3,473,778,818 kilowatt hours of electricity distributed during the year. This was an increase of 150,211,938 kilowatt hours over the year before.

Although there are 222 electric light and power companies now reporting to the state utilities commission, eleven of them serve more than 50 per cent of the total users. On January 1 of this year these companies reported as follows on consumers:

Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., (Cleveland) 233,055.

Union Gas & Electric Co. (Cincinnati), 107,423.

Ohio Power Co. (Canton, Newark, Steubenville, Fremont, etc.), 93,100.

Toledo-Edison Co. (Toledo), 75,285.

Dayton Power & Light Co. (Dayton), 66,609.

Columbus Railway, Power & Light Co. (Columbus), 65,712.

Ohio Public Service Co. (Lorain, Alliance, Mansfield, Massillon, Elyria, etc.) 59,878.

Northern Ohio Traction & Light Co. (Youngstown), 50,745.

Pennsylvania - Ohio Electric Light Co. (Youngstown), 38,222.

Ohio Edison Co. (Springfield), 19,395.

Ohio Service Co. (Coshocton), 17,508.

Knitted Bracelet Holds Powder Puff.

Since the powder puff has forced itself into the drawing room and on the streets as a legitimate member of Everywoman's outfit, the once boudoir recluse has found a myriad of ways to have itself inconspicuously worn. With the birth of the hand knit handkerchief bracelet, the powder puff has found a new hiding place, for it lies hidden under the knitting and the handkerchief in a pocket in the knitted bracelet. This pocket is in the strip between the two openings through which the handkerchief is drawn.

Grateful for the Handout

MARY stopped short with a little gasp of surprise and shock. The lounching, ill-dressed, haggard figure on the park bench could be no other than Edwin, whom she had seen the last time three years before. The odd little quiver that her first sight of him used to give her went over her.

"Edwin, is it—?" she asked hesitatingly.

"Hello, Mary. It's been many moons since I saw you last, and you suggested it be the last time," he answered a little bitterly.

His words stirred old memories. "Oh, Edwin, those—won't you come with me to lunch? I—I don't want to chat with you again," she said hurriedly, feeling within her some old memories stir.

He agreed readily, and her quick mind told her that he was really hungry.

"I'll go, but you must pay the check. I'm clean broke," he said bluntly, joining her.

He was hardly a respectable figure beside her neat and attractive self, and many eyes were turned to them as they went on. But Mary did not care; some of the old happiness returned as she walked beside him.

In a sheltered corner of the restaurant, over a laden table, they finally faced each other.

"I haven't had a square meal in weeks," he admitted with his old frankness. "Now, don't tell me I am wasting my life, as you used to. I'm no good. I admit it."

"No, Edwin, I won't scold now. Then I had such bright hopes for you."

"Now you have given me up. I don't blame you. But I'm grateful for this hand-out."

"Don't," she begged. "I am still—still interested in you. Please be kind. Tell me of yourself."

He laughed harshly, then rapidly sketched his drifting from position to position and always downward. Then, gently, she told of her own work as secretary to one of the city's influential business men.

He listened grimly. "You have been successful enough for both of us."

She saw that her own success seemed to offend him, and she tried to change the subject.

"Now I must go. Mary, I thank you for feeding a beggar by the way—"

"Please, Edwin."

"That's what I am. I don't want to see you pay the check, so I am going. So long."

He went quickly, leaving her almost in tears. He had changed so much, and yet she caught glimpses, faint it is true, of the man she had loved.

She reached for her handbag, which she had hung over the back of her chair. The bag was gone. Her heart seemed to stop beating. Could he have taken the bag? In the confusion in her own mind the truth appeared. He and no other could possibly have taken it.

She waited until the tumult within her had quieted. Then she easily made arrangements to have the lunch charged, and with the world gray about her went back to the office.

In the weeks that grew to months and then to a year the deep wound of his act healed, leaving across her heart only the thin trace of a scar that gave to the outside world no hint of the depth of the wound beneath.

One day Mr. Shively, her employer, turned to her with some papers. "Mary, one of our western men is in the outer office. Please ask him to step in."

She obeyed, and found herself face to face with—Edwin, no longer sloven in appearance nor weak of face. His face was lined, but not with the corroding of dissipation, rather the lines of self-discipline and steadfast purpose.

She stumbled back to her desk and listened to voices that sounded far away as she heard Mr. Shively praise him for his good work and assure him that there was work for him in the East; then she heard Edwin's voice: "May I see Miss Baker, just a moment, Mr. Shively?"

"Sure enough, Marsh. I did not know you were old friends. By the way, visit here in the office. It's about time for my afternoon game of golf anyway."

Mary heard the door close. She heard Edwin approach. Something was laid on her desk and opened. It was her handbag, everything in it intact; and Edwin's voice, full of pain but tinged with some hint of a man who had found himself, spoke gently. "Mary, I stole that, but it has been the making of me. I found in the bag that little photo of myself. It touched me to the very soul; and I made up my mind I would make good or die in the attempt—make good for the sake of the man you might have loved. I have been through hell, but I believe I have come through clean. I joined the western agency, and here I am. The thought of you has been very precious to me through this year of struggle. You will forgive me and not think too hard of me, won't you?"

She turned suddenly, saw the grief in his eyes, brown and luminous with what she knew was love for her; and the next moment her arms were around his neck, and his were about her, while the room seemed to fill with a shining peace and happiness.

Crétonne and Worsted Yarns Combine in Bathing Costumes.

Bare legs may not be exposed by the more deadly sex on beaches where the public gathers. One piece bathing suits may be barred, but so far the censors have not attempted to forbid brilliant colors for beach wear. There may, one day, come a colored Volstead person, but for this season at least we are safe. Color, brilliant color, and still more color, is the rage.

Gay figured crétonne bathing suits are very popular. Small figured designs, large figured designs, elaborate and simple, the crétonne bathing suit makes itself felt. And with this sensible and attractive suit go bathing shoes or slippers to match. One very attractive crétonne model is trimmed with crocheted worsted yarn parrots, which are applied to the front and sides. Crocheted parrots on the tip of each shoe bring the costume into harmony.

Towers in Warfare

The tower was used in fortification at a very early period in connection with a wall. One of the earliest instances of this type of fortification was at Nineveh, built more than 2000 B. C. The wall was more than 50 miles long, 120 feet high and had 1,500 towers.

Bird Babies' Photos

Never attempt to photograph bird babies until they are sufficiently sturdy to be taken from the nest without harm, says Nature Magazine. The best time for juvenile portraiture in catbird land is just prior to the breaking of home ties, when the youngsters are fully feathered.

Their Glory Divided

In the governor's garden at Quebec is a granite column bearing the name of Wolfe on one side and that of Montcalm on the other. It is said to be the only instance on this continent of a common monument to the victor and the vanquished.

AMUSEMENTS

An excellent cast of favorite screen players are seen in the new Encore production, "Is Love Everything?" now playing at the Met theater and include such excellent names as Alma Rubens Frank Mayo, H. B. Garner, Lilyan Tashman and Walter McGrail. Miss Roberts is particularly well cast in the role of the luxuriously raised girl who, for mercenary reasons, is forced to choose a wealthy man for a husband instead of the one she really loves. The husband, played by H. B. Warner, is however, not willing to be merely the owner of a beautiful chattel and, when he discovers that it is only loyalty and not love that she gives in exchange for his wealth and devotion, decides to let her again choose between them. This results in a strikingly original situation and brings about some sensational scenes.

Repeating Slander as Bad as Starting It

Atlanta, Ga.—"Tale bearers are as bad as tale makers," thinks the Georgia Court of Appeals. This statement was made in a decision upholding a judgment in the Stephens Superior court, in which $2,000 was awarded in a suit alleging repetition of slanderous remarks.

The court held that even though the original slander started with a third party and the repeater had accepted the statement in good faith, every repetition was a willful slander.

WOMAN DIP TELLS OF HER THRILLS

Fascinated by Excitement of Going Into Pockets.

New York.—Mrs. Tillie Dorf, Brooklyn, who declares she became a pick-pocket when eight years old, will ask clemency when she goes before Kings County Judge McLaughlin for sentence. She is in the Raymond street jail, having pleaded guilty of picking the pocket of a woman in a Brooklyn department store. She took $10.30 and was caught by a store detective.

At the jail Mrs. Dorf gave an exhibition of her skill by extracting a vanity case from the pocket of a woman reporter.

"I have done that since I was eight years old," Mrs. Dorf said. "I began with relatives, and I have kept it up ever since. It gives me a thrill I can't get in any other way, but thrills don't count in the end. Sometimes I go straight for months. Then my fingers begin to tingle—I want to see if they can do again what they have so often done."

"As I grew older I began to think how many pocketbooks there were in the world, and how easy it would be to open them. I began to operate in cheap stores and on the sidewalks. After my marriage I promised to reform, but I was unable to break myself of my habit. I have no excuse to offer—I just can't help it."

Mundane Fire No Treat to Miss Spore's Spirits

New York.—The familiars of Marian Spore, psychic painter, failed to apprise her that rubbish had begun to smolder in the ground floor hall of the former Delmonico's at Forty-fourth street and Fifth avenue, on the second floor of which Miss Spore has her exhibition.

The apparition that suddenly materialized at the doorway of the studio yelling, "Fire, beat it!" was plain flesh and blood. And it wore spats.

About thirty persons who were watching Miss Spore's methods of painting or staring at her plump and colorful canvases, obeyed the warning promptly, joining the rush on the stairs from a golf school on the third floor, which met at the street level the exodus from a real estate office.

Miss Spore, however, who depends entirely on spiritual guidance, knew better than to flee. She began swathing her paintings in canvas to protect them from smoke, which already was drifting into her studio in ever-thickening waves.

All the time the smoke rolled blacker and denser up the stairs and into Miss Spore's studio. All the time Miss Spore, with never a glance out of window or into the hallway, coolly wrapped up her pictures in canvas. There were 175 of them, and by the time she finished the job the last firemen were picking up their hose. Miss Spore missed the fire completely.

His Teeth in His Lungs Send Man to Hospitals

New York.—Attacked by a violent spell of coughing, Conrad Wimler, 187 Thirty-second street, Brooklyn, swallowed his upper teeth. His wife took him to Norwegian hospital, but physicians there were unable to locate the plate and suggested that Wimler return home until later, when an X-ray could be taken and the teeth removed.

He returned home, but the pain became so intense that his wife took him to the Brooklyn Eye and Ear hospital. Physicians there said the work would require specialists and advised him to go home and wait until 9 o'clock. Wimler did.

At 9 o'clock he again appeared, so weak that he was put to bed while the pulmonary region was X-rayed. Late that night the plate with a full set of teeth was removed by Dr. John Auwerda, fourteen hours after Wimler had swallowed them. Neither the plate nor Wimler's throat were injured.

Woman Tramps Country 2 Years Dressed as Man

St. Louis, Mo.—How a woman has been tramping throughout the country in the guise of a man for two years was revealed here last night when several transients sought shelter at a police station. Close questioning revealed that "he" was Grace Crow, formerly of White Eagle, Okla., who roamed in men's clothing, because it helped her obtain employment. Dressed in an old suit, tattered shirt, worn shoes and cap, and with her hair cut short, she said she had readily passed as a man since the death of her parents several years ago.

What Do You Know About
Sole Leather?

HERE ARE A FEW LEATHER FACTS:

The best leather is tanned Steer Hide.
Steers are raised for their meat—not for their hides.
There is as great a difference in the quality of leather as in the quality of meat.
Good leather always comes from over good meat, and vice versa.
Heavy hides are taken from cattle four years or older.
Most thick leather nowadays is artificially swelled by acid—often sulphuric acid, which rots the fiber, rots the stitching and destroys the wear. The breeding up of cattle by dairymen and the younger kill to supply tender meat, produce the best hide and the best leather, of medium thickness.
Country hides are badly cut in the skinning and are of little value for soles leather.
Most newspaper quotations are on country hides
Packer Hides are rarely flesh-cut in skinning and, therefore, bring several times the price of country hides.
Hides are always heavily salted to preserve, and are sold salt and all.
The average weight of a green-salted, steer hide is 60 lbs
To properly tan, it must remain in the tanning liquors from six to nine months.
A 60 lb. green-salted hide will lose 20 lbs. or 1/3 its green weight in a good, natural, non-acid tannage.
A tanned hide will give four distinct qualities of leather.

DECLARATION SIGNED
BY MEN OF ALL AGES

Few Graybeards Among the Nation's Founders.

Many people think of the signers of the Declaration of Independence as graybeards, old in years, ripe in wisdom and endowed with the vision which decades of experience is supposed to bring. None of the 56 men who finally affixed their signatures to this important declaration, pledging to its support their lives, fortunes and sacred honor, was old enough to be suspected of senility, though a few were so young that they might be liable to a charge of immaturity of judgment.

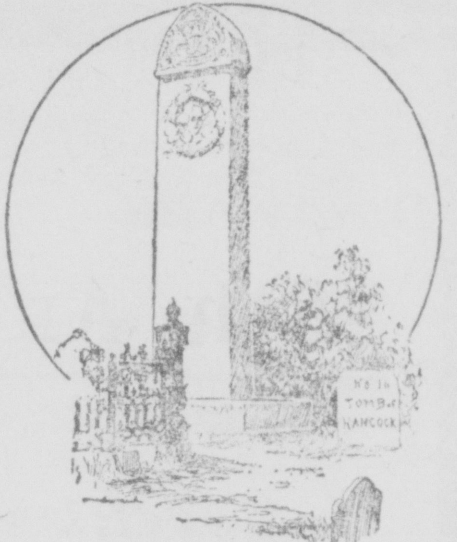

John Hancock, president of the congress, something of a "blade" and none too conservative in his attitude on some important matters, was only thirty-nine years old when the general congress assembled in Independence hall, Philadelphia, to consider the wording of the historical document. The oldest man in the congress was Benjamin Franklin, who had passed his seventieth birthday only six months before. The youngest was Edward Rutledge of South Carolina, who attained his twenty-seventh birthday in the November following the famous Fourth of July; Thomas Lynch, Jr., of the same state was his senior by only a few months.

Of the whole number but seven had passed their sixtieth year; nine were between fifty and sixty years old, 19 were between forty and fifty, and the same number, 19, were between thirty and forty. The first mentioned were the only ones under thirty years of age. The average age of the members of the general congress was 43.87 years. It has been remarked that there were enough young men to furnish enthusiasm, enough middle-aged men to check indiscreet action and enough well-matured men to balance this most important conference.

The first of the signers to die was Button Gwinnett of Georgia, who lived only until May 27 of the following year. Charles Carroll of Virginia was the longest-lived after that memorable date. He watched the new states grow in power and influence until November 13, 1832; so that some persons still living might have touched a hand which held the pen while signing the Declaration of Independence.

Solemn Tribute Paid
to Old Liberty Bell

"John Marshall, then chief justice of the United States, died in Philadelphia on July 6, 1835," says an old newspaper account. "On July 8, exactly 59 years to the day of the anniversary of the proclamation of the Declaration of Independence to the people, his remains were borne from Philadelphia to his native state, Virginia, for burial. During the funeral solemnities the Liberty bell, while slowly tolling, cracked through its side, forever silenced but not less eloquent in its mute patriotic appeal. It had lived out its life (82 years) of usefulness as men live out their lives. Its active work was done; it had called the people together to preserve their rights under the British crown; it had rung out its clamorous defiance on the great day of the proclamation of the Declaration of their Independence; it had glorified all anniversaries of that Independence. Henceforth, it remains in its ancient place, the silent symbol of not only Liberty throughout all the land, but through out the world."

GOVERNMENT

Won One Case and Lost One In Teapot Dome Controversy.

Washington, June 19.—(UP.)—As matters now stand, the government has won one case and lost one, in its suits to regain control of naval oil reserves.

The Doheny leases on the California reserves were declared illegal by the California district court. That case now is on appeal. The Teapot Dome case, decided against the government also will be appealed, it was said.

The Mammoth Oil Company lease on Teapot Dome was signed on April 7th, 1922, Secretary of the Navy Denby and Secretary of the Interior Fall both signing for the government.

This contract leased on the reserve, known as Teapot Dome, and comprising 9,321 acres, for a period of twenty years or longer under terms which in effect, made the Mammoth Oil Company the government's agents or instrument for getting oil out of the ground and storing fuel oil for the government along the sea coasts easily accessible to the navy.

Longevity From Sap?

Longevity through the utilization of sap from trees as a food for human beings is the theory of an Oregon scientist, who is investigating whether there is any foundation for a myth that the ancients who lived to a great age drank the sap of trees. Man must be satisfied with a life of seventy or eighty years, while a redwood tree in California, which was a seedling 525 years before Christ, goes on living at 2,500 years of age, he reasoned. If this scientist can find and isolate the long-life substance in the California redwoods, he believes he will have something better than a gland cure for restoring youth and prolonging life, says Capper's Weekly.

IN MEMORIAM

Editor Union-Herald:—Arthur Murllette was born in Hocking county, Ohio, December 7, 1848, and passed out of this life at Wichita, Kansas, May 17, 1925, having attained the age of 76 years, five months and ten days.

In 1886 he came to Comanche county, Kansas, and from there to Barber county where he spent the last thirty-five years of his life.

On October 11, 1883, Mr. Murllette was married to Miss Rose Mettler. To this union four daughters were born; two having preceded the father in death. They were Grace, who died at the age of six months and Mabel, who passed away in 1908, at the age of twenty years. Besides the wife, the deceased is survived by his two daughters, Mrs. Myrtle McKittrick, of Hazelton and Mrs. Opal Schrader, of Wichita. A brother and sister also survive. They are Ransford Murllette, of Stoutsville, Ohio, and Mrs. Jane Wyncoop of Delaware, Ohio.

Mr. Murllette was a member of the I. O. O. F. for a number of years and for twenty-seven years was a member of the Church of Christ, formerly a member of the church in Medicine Lodge, later removing to Hazelton, and more recently returning with his membership to Medicine Lodge. As a good citizen, a worthy friend and neighbor, and a Christian gentleman he was ever esteemed and loved by those who knew him.

Funeral services were conducted from the Christian church of Medicine Lodge at 2:30 o'clock Monday, May 18, 1925, in charge of the pastor, Elder E. G. Hanley, assisted by the local I. O. O. F. lodge.

Porcelain Old Product

Porcelain factories and stores were operating in Arabia as long ago as 800 A. D. The Arabian geographer Mohamed-el-Efridi, in 1154, published an account of the town of Djankoy where "Chinese glass" was made, and added that there was no finer trade than that of potmaker. Certain towns and villages became known for their porcelain and other ceramic products, though the industry was obviously limited to certain towns.

C. A. C. DANCE.

More than three hundred attended the jitney dance at the C. A. C. gym last Saturday night. The splendid seven piece orchestra directed by Dr. Russell Stuckey of Lancaster, furnished excellent music for the dancers. The gym was cool and comfortable made possible by the twelve large electric fans and there was plenty of room on the excellent floor that is always in perfect condition for dancing. Among the guests were noted the returned college students of this and surrounding towns and cities.

PERMANENT HIGHWAYS ARE MYTHICAL

UNCLE SAMS INFORMS PUBLIC HARD SURFACE ROADS HIT

To Keep Them Continuously In Good Order, It Is necessary to Start maintaining It the Day the Construction Is completed—Improved Roads Are Not Luxuries.

The department of agriculture warns the people that when they speak about permanent highways they talk about something that never existed and never will exist.

"A common mistake," says the department, "is the idea that there is such a thing as a permanent road. This delusion has been responsible for much disregard of road maintenance, one of the state highway departments however, any longer harbors this error. It is now thoroughly understood by those public agencies that all roads of type, gradually depreciate and wear out under the wheels of vehicles and the action of the weather. To keep a road in continuously good order, it is necessary to start maintaining it the day its construction is completed."

Another common error, says the department, is that all roads should be hard-surfaced. On this interesting phase of the road building problem the department of agriculture expresses itself as follows:

"Hard-surfacing with concrete, brick asphalt, stone or wood blocks is an expensive process. When its cost is greater than the saving accruing from the improvement, hard surfacing is not advisable. It is possible to make great improvements in roads without hard surfacing them and these improvements are quite effective in reducing the cost of travel.

"When vehicles using a road are comparatively few, an unsurfaced but graded and drained road can be made and maintained at very low cost. If the traffic is so great that an unsurfaced road cannot be maintained in continuous good condition, surfacing with stone, sand-clay or gravel, although more costly than simple grading, will generally be compensated by the greater saving in the cost of operating vehicles over it. Similarly, when the traffic is greater than a gravel road will carry, a bituminous, macadam surface can be economically applied. It is not necessary to use one of the hard surfaced types until the traffic becomes very dense. When that point is reached, hard surfacing is necessary and economical.

All roads should be improved to the maximum degree that the traffic on them justifies, but no road should be improved beyond its earning capacity. When this principle is observed, the savings in the cost of operating the vehicles it has to carry. In other words, the return to the public in the form of economic transportation is the sole measure of the worth or road improvement. To say that all roads should be hard surfaced is merely another way of urging expenditures in excess of income."

Improved roads, the department says are not luxuries.

"For the movement of every vehicle over a road there is a certain cost," the department adds, "which is less if the road be improved than if it be left in a state of nature. Logically, therefore, the only limit that should be placed on expenditure for road improvement is the amount that can be saved in vehicular operating costs. This depends, of course, upon the number of vehicles using the road. It is pointed out that the country loses more in increased cost of operating vehicles by not improving roads than it costs to improve them.

Harry Bochart was a business visit or in Columbus today.

LIQUOR LAW VIOLATORS SENTENCED

Cleveland, O., June 20 (U.P.)—In passing sentence on the Hayner whisky conspirators today Federal Judge D. C. Westenhaver said:

"On an occasion like this I do not see fit to lecture the defendants. I will sentence Russell to two years imprisonment on the first count (conspiracy to violate the prohibition law) and impose a fine of $7,500 and sentence him to two years on the second count, (conspiracy to violate the internal revenue law) to run concurrently. As to Barnett, his sentence will be the same.

"But as to Copeland, I have some difficulty. I am not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that he was not an underpaid substitute. I will have some regard for his final position."

He was given two years imprisonment and $2500 fine.

The judge then went on down thru the list, defense attorneys occasionally interrupting to ask for leniency.

DEATH CALLS U. S. SENATOR EDWIN F. LADD

COMPLETION OF FRANKLIN PAVED STREET

Paving of Franklin street was finished to the east line of Mingo street Saturday afternoon. All that is left to be done is the pouring of asphalt and going over a few rough places on the street and curb.

The work on the street shows what a live organization like the contractors The W. H. Ringwald & Sons company, of Chillicothe, can accomplish with real road machinery, experience and organization behind them. The work of excavation was begun April 12, the paving was commenced five weeks ago and this would have been completed earlier had not the firm been held up in the shipment of asphalt.

GASOLINE TAX PRODUCES BIG SUM OF MONEY

Every Day $30,000 Reaches State's Coffers—Small Cost for Operation.

Despite efforts still being made to have the gasoline tax law set aside, the law was operative and is running smoothly. Based on an estimate of the volume of consumption of gasoline in the state, it is figured that $30,000 are trickling into the coffers of the state every day as revenue from this source.

It was said when the act was under consideration that the collection of the tax would be a complicated and difficult affair. The fact, however, is that the state auditor, treasurer and tax commission in addition to their regular duties with the assistance of one new official stenographer and a stenographer who are domiciled in an outer office of the state tax commission are taking care of the revenue collecting.

Later it may be necessary to have some traveling auditors visit the filling stations to check up on the reports of sales. The state will have the records of the refineries and large oil companies to use in this check so that it is not likely that any attempts will be made on the part of the dealers to "beat" the tax.

It has been predicted that with the enforcement of the gasoline tax law the gasoline bootlegger would develop but with such a small rake-off to be obtained—two cents on the gallon, the risk would be too great for that. As long as the profit to be made in rum running is so large and the risk is greater than it has been up to this time, it would seem unlikely that the clandestine selling of gasoline would be attractive to anyone minded to make money that way.

Stage construction of gravel roads is to have precedence over expensive hard surfaced highway improvements during the next two years of the Donahay administration, it developed Saturday, as a result of Governor Donahay's pronouncement relative to the use of the gasoline tax revenue for gravel roads only.

The governor's message was directed to Highway Director Boulay and his 11 Division engineers, and suggested that the gas tax money could be put to a more profitable use on stage construction than on improving and widening the expensive hard surface system.

Since Director Boulay's term of office expires August 10, and he is to be succeeded by someone more in accord with the governor's policies, it is safe to suppose that the new highway director, whoever he may be will heartily support the gravel road program and will minimize the improvement of hard surface road to the advantage of the gravel highways. Ex-pansion of the state system by use of gravel, is to be the policy of the Donahay administration, according to present indications.

Potato's Importance

The potato is one of the many valuable gifts of America to the world. Most histories, busy chronicling wars and elections and perhaps inventions, fail to emphasize the introduction of the potato from America to Europe, or else mention it quite incidentally. Economists and sociologists, however, could make a good case for the potato as the New world product which has most deeply affected life in the old world.

The Clue to His Door-Mat

By JAMES F. DWYER

WNU Service

IT WAS midnight. In Fifth avenue there were few pedestrians, and a fat man in evening dress hurrying northward, attracted attention. Six night birds, who thought his actions mysterious, followed a few paces in the rear.

At Thirty-second street a policeman, dozing on the opposite side of the road, straightened himself as he saw the hurrying group coming towards him. Swinging his night stick he crossed over and waited the approach of the little procession.

The Law was a trifle astonished. As he stood looking after the leader of the hurrying squad, he was jostled by the inquisitive ones following, and he became annoyed. He grabbed a straw-hatted youth by the shoulder and questioned him.

"What's the matter?" he cried. "Search me," answered the questioned one. "Let me go; I want to see what the ole guy is up to."

The policeman lost his temper. He was being treated with disrespect. A festive citizen was running a fool procession over his beat without giving him the least explanation! So he let go of the youth's shoulder and dashed madly after the man in evening dress. "Here, what's the game?" he panted. "What sort of a stunt are you up to, anyhow?"

The fat man shook off the grip of the Law and ran faster than ever, his outstretched hands circling round each other like the arms of a windmill in a gale.

"Stoop down and I'll tell you," he gasped, as the officer made another effort to restrain him.

"Been doin' that all the way from Twenty-eighth street," gasped the early followers, proud in the possession of that much information. "He's told the cop a joke, an' now the hickory wielder is hittin' the trail with him."

At Forty-eighth street the policeman met the officer on the adjoining beat, and hooking him by the arm he whispered into his ear as he kept pace with the fat man. The new policeman guffawed loudly, and again the angry crowd looked vainly for the humor that seemed apparent to the two guardians of the peace. The first policeman slackened speed, called out a friendly "Good luck" to the fat man, and then returned to his own beat, while his comrade trotted swiftly in his place.

The fat man swung east, down Fifty-third street, and new recruits joined the procession at every yard. But all blustered vainly for information. Questions put by the newcomers were met with the one answer: "Don't know; look at his hands. Been twisting them round and round all the way from Twenty-eighth street."

Crossing Third avenue the fat man halted suddenly. He knelt down upon the car tracks, and the officer stooped beside him. The crowd pressed round him the swiftly-swung nightstick swept them back. The man in evening dress crawled across the tracks and raked the ground with his fingers.

Presently he leaped to his feet and yelled out excitedly: "It's all right, officer," he cried, and once again his hands started to revolve round each other as he dashed towards the water.

Just here a third policeman was initiated into the mystery that was troubling the crowd, and with a merry laugh he took up a position by the side of the fat man. The crowd cursed collectively. Here was a mystery that had been explained three times to bulky policemen, yet they were kept in ignorance. It wasn't fair. They had a right to know why the man in evening dress was doing the windmill performance with his hands, and why that stunt amused the policeman. Much of their breath was exhausted in strange phrases denouncing the secrecy of the police, but they were determined to see the end.

Near Second avenue a man standing on the sidewalk turned when he heard the noise of the charging squad and contemplated the runners. Then he stepped into the street and crossed over. The fat man chuckled. He whispered to the policeman at his right hand, and the officer dashed ahead. The man in front started to run, but his pursuer overhauled him in a dozen strides, and they rolled on the pavement.

"Wot's the matter?" gasped the captured one. "Wot are yer scruffin' me for?"

"This gentleman wants his rubber door-mat," murmured the policeman, relieving his captive of the parcel he carried beneath his arm.

"Hully Gee!" exclaimed the prisoner, rubbing his eyes and staring round him at the crowd. "Where did yer get the mob, an' how did yer know I had it, anyhow?"

"I had you on a string," explained the fat man, holding up a black thread in the light of the street lamp. "I've caught five men who have tried to steal that mat. It's attached to a thousand yards of strong thread, and as they generally grab it when the streets are quiet, the trail is always clear."

Fence Post Puzzle Solved by Locust

Black Variety Grows Best on Alkaline or Sweet Soil.

The fence post problem, says Professor J. A. Cope, forester from the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, has become serious with the almost complete disappearance of chestnut in this country because of the blight.

A grape grower in Chautauqua county who uses hundreds of posts every year has solved this problem by the use of black locust. He found that he could grow suitable posts in 15 years, and further, that these posts would last 15 years after being set instead of the customary ten years expected of chestnut posts.

In addition, he has been able to get another crop of posts from sprouts in ten years, because of the great vigor of the locust tree.

As the black locust is really a legume, it grows best on a sweet or alkaline soil, and it is necessary to restrict plantings to such sites in order to make headway against the deadly locust borer.

In a trip to Chautauqua county, Professor Cope says that all the volunteer stands of locust which he examined showed evidences of attack by this beetle, but that on the better sites where there was a non-acid soil, the locust had grown enough to practically nullify the work of the borer.

Planting the locust with pine also helps to protect it against the borer, as the beetles like to fly around in the sunshine, and if the trunks can be kept in the shade, the beetles will not lay their eggs on them. Young white pines would certainly furnish the shade, and would also prevent the locust from making too many side branches, which are not desirable for posts. Such a mixed planting deserves trial.

Bad Practice Is Shown in Pasture Management

Romance and drama share their thunder with animal industry, plant culture, and forestry in a new United States Department of Agriculture motion picture, "The Green Barrier."

"The Green Barrier" is a two-reeler, punctuated with thrills. The Piney Woods of the South provide the locale and the story is built about the long-established but disastrous custom of burning the woods to "green up" pasture for cattle. The drama reaches its climax when a woods fire, started by one of the characters, gets beyond control, driven by a high wind. The flames spread to the farm dwelling, and while they are fighting frantically to save their home, the mother of the leading character is trapped in the woods by the fire.

The fallacy of firing the woods is forcefully brought out. The importance of fire-resisting carpet grass, lespedeza, and other highly nutritive pasture grass is stressed. The film also contains good sound lessons in pasture management and reforestation. "The Green Barrier" was photographed in southern Mississippi and contains many scenes of rare beauty.

Sex Quite Difficult to Determine Among Geese

Sex is difficult to distinguish in geese, particularly if the birds are young. The gander is usually somewhat larger than the goose and has a shrill cry, while the goose makes a coarser, lower noted call. The male has a heavier, longer neck and a larger head. Sex may better be determined by inspecting the sexual organs or during the mating season by observation. The sphincter muscle, which closes the anus of the female is folded, and widening or sinuous if stretched, while a light pressure on the corresponding section of the male will make the sexual organ protrude.

One gander is usually mated with two or three females, and after mating allowed to run in flocks. Three to five years is best age.

FARM FACTS

Make plans now to treat potato seed with formaldehyde or corrosive sublimate.

Buy your spray pumps and materials early and be ready to start spraying at the proper time.

Plenty of bedding for the cows does three things—keeps them cleaner, provides more warmth, and saves more of the liquid parts of the manure.

Don't forget that pure seed showing a high percentage of germination is just as important to success in farming as pure-bred, high-producing live stock.

Give the brood sow plenty of exercise, clean, dry quarters, and a well-balanced ration, is the advice of swine extension workers of the state college.

Sweet clover may be sown in the spring, and if the soil is favorable for its growth you can get considerable hog pasture from it during the summer and fall.

Sweet clover may be sown the same as red clover is usually sown, except that it should be sown rather early, as it takes more moisture to germinate sweet clover seed than for red clover seed.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

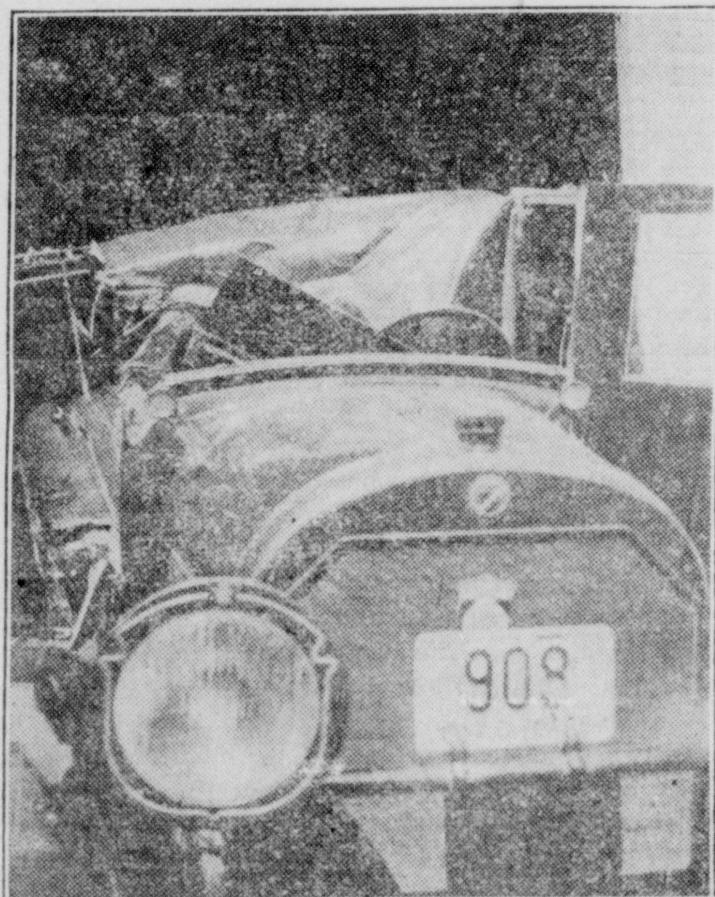

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

George Kelly Is Best First Sacker

George Kelly, first baseman of the Giants, in the opinion of many players is one of the best first sackers of all time. His height, used in reaching for high or erratic throws, and his fielding and batting, make him valuable.

Astonishing Swat Was Cause of Small Riot

Lee Meadows caused a small riot on the Pirate bench the other day when he sent his now famous home run over the right-field wall. But as the pitcher ran around the sacks, his mates "framed" him. They decided to refrain from offering one word of praise for the astonishing swat.

Lee came in after his "dash" around the bases. Any player, especially a pitcher, expects laudatory remarks from his mates upon an occasion of this kind. Lee ran to the dugout where absolute silence prevailed. Meadows stood it for a minute or two and then broke loose. "What in the devil's the matter here," he shouted. "Did you fellows think that smash was foul?"

Gray Helps Athletics

Right now Connie Mack is threatening to win another championship in the American league and much credit is due Sam Gray for the good standing of the Athletics.

ONE-BASE HITS

By JACK SIMPSON.

Balls Hitting Umpire.

The umpire has always been known as a necessary evil on a ball field and quite often is hit with a thrown or batted ball while following a play.

If before reaching a player a batted ball touches either the person or clothing of an umpire, the ball is not in play and the batter is granted first base, but no bases can be taken by any other base runners unless forced to do so by the batter becoming a base runner.

The ball is in play if it comes in contact with the umpire after it has passed through the infield and all base runners can advance at their own peril. A fairly batted ball that strikes the umpire while the latter is on foul ground is in play, his position having no effect on the ball. If a batted ball that is hit through the pitcher, or which the latter knocks down but does not hold, passes on and strikes the umpire, the ball is in play and the batter can be thrown out.

All thrown balls that hit the umpire are in play and base runners can get all the bases they can make. An umpire interfering with a catcher throwing to bases to catch runners must send all runners back to their original bases, as no runs can be scored or base runners advanced through this interference.

More Girls Are Taking to Big Athletic Events

More girls read the sports page than the society column, if the results of a recent industrial survey may be taken as a fair indication of present-day tendencies in this group. This anomaly, no doubt, is partly due to the active participation of women in the athletic events arranged everywhere for members of their sex.

The fact that big sporting events are generally topics of conversation in virtually all circles and the national absorption in baseball may be considered contributory causes. Intercollegiate and interclub athletic events also attract many women readers.

Diamond Notes

California colleges are considering a state baseball league for 1926.

It is fatal to a trout to have a perfect fielding average, and never miss a fly.

Philadelphia has released Pitcher Dana Fillingim to Beaumont of the Texas league.

The pitching in the American league, says a sport expert, is better this spring than last.

Little Rock has purchased Bud Clancy, young first baseman, from the Chicago White Sox.

Horace Ford, second baseman of the Philadelphia Nationals, has been purchased by the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Garland Buckeye of the Cleveland Indians is the biggest pitcher in the major leagues. He weighs 240 pounds.

Catcher Hofmann of the New York Yankees has been purchased by the St. Paul club of the American association.

Bob Naylor, formerly with the Philadelphia Athletics, has been purchased by Manager Wade Killifer for the Seattle Indians.

The Brooklyn club has sent Pitcher Guy Cantrell, obtained from the Western association, to Jersey City of the International league.

Manager Nicholas Allen of the St. Paul club of the American association has prohibited the playing of golf by members of his team.

H. E. Heilmann of Detroit has not held his place in the leading five hitters of the American league to date, but he is coming back strongly.

Pitcher George B. Winn, left-hander, who was with Milwaukee last year, and who has been with Little Rock this season, has been obtained by Shreveport.

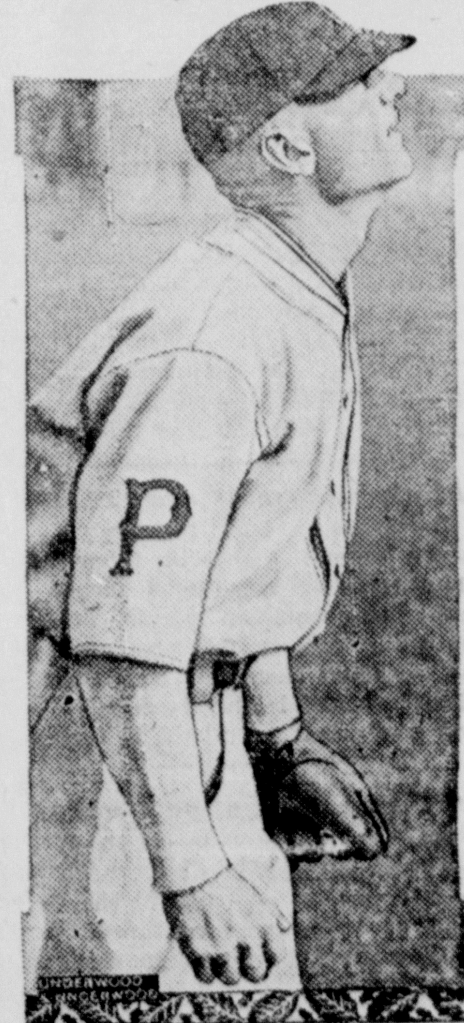

George Kopshaw, catcher, was sold by the Flint club of the Michigan Ontario baseball league to the Baltimore Orioles of the International league.

George Sisler's record of safe hitting came to an end when he failed to hit off Harris and Groves of the Athletics, after connecting in thirty-four games.

Jersey City has obtained on option Guy Cantrell, big right-handed pitcher from the Brooklyn Dodgers. The Dodgers got Cantrell from the Western association.

Third Baseman Goldie Rapp, hold-out on the Toledo American association team, has been purchased by Rochester. He is a veteran who has seen big-league service.

Carey Still a Star

Max Carey, veteran outfielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, continues to play in brilliant fashion. His hitting is as hard as ever and his speed on the bases is unusually good.

Pigeons Fly Far

Up to the year 1913, 800 miles was the record distance flown by any homing pigeon, but in that year a flight was organized between Rome and Derby, and a bird belonging to C. H. Hudson, a Derby fancier, arrived safely at its loft four weeks after being liberated in Rome. The distance exceeds 1,000 miles. Even this record has been exceeded by two birds which flew from Pensacola, Fla., to Fall River, Mass., a distance of 1,182 miles. The time taken was fifteen and a half days.—London Tit-Bits.

Wife Gave Him the Tip

Jones was an enthusiastic spectator at a big race. Having little knowledge of the sport, and being anxious to have a small bet, he looked over the list of runners until his eye rested on "Behave Yourself." Jones was one of the few who won on the race. "How did you happen to pick the winner?" asked a friend. "I had an idea. 'Behave yourself,' was the last thing my wife said to me when I left home."

Sun-Dried Oysters Eaten

In Mongolia sun-dried oysters are a common article of food and are sold in the market places. They are sold loose, in a wreath form, spitted on sticks of rattan or circled after being dried for hanging in stores. They are not so palatable as fresh oysters, but they are eaten either dried or stewed.

BEST ICE CREAMS
CONTAIN GELATINE

Not as Cheap Filler, But To Prevent
Crystallization, Says
Professor.

Gelatine is not put in commercial ice cream as a cheap filler. At the present time it is the most expensive constituent and is used to prevent water crystallization under low temperatures, according to a recent statement given out by the dairy department at Ohio State University.

"Gelatine is a constituent of ice cream that the consuming public knows little about," said Professor R. B. Stoltz in a radio talk from WEAO at the University. "The general impression among some people is that gelatine is added to cut down the cost of manufacture.

"As a matter of fact gelatine is used in your ice cream to prevent water of crystallization, and for that purpose the higher grades, which cost from 55 to 65 cents a pound, are most economical for the manufacturer to use, making gelatine one of the most expensive constituents of ice cream.

"It has not been many years ago when some manufacturers used gums and other colloids or stabilizers, and advertised to the consuming public that their ice cream contained no gelatine. This made the consuming public believe that the presence of gelatine in ice cream was a detriment and something to be shunned, and little has ever been done to correct this wrong impression."

In speaking of the mineral constituents of ice cream Professor Stoltz said that one-half pint of ice cream contains as much lime as one and one-half pounds of bread, four pounds of meat or three and one-third pounds of potatoes, and as much iron as four ounces of raisins.

M'MILLAN NAVY
POLAR EXPEDITION
SET SAIL TODAY

Wiscasset, Maine, June 20.—(UP).—Out of the peaceful little harbor of Wiscasset, with the cheers and good wishes of their countrymen ringing in their ears, the explorers of the McMillan-Navy Polar expedition will set sail this afternoon upon the most ambitious American attempt at Arctic conquest since Peary planted the Stars and Stripes at the top of the world 16 years ago.

Even before the tight little vessels "Peary" and "Bowdoin" weighed anchor, the State of Maine was disputing its right to claim sovereignty over any land the expedition might discover. Governor Brewster at a farewell dinner presented a State flag to McMillan and said:

"If you find land up there, we hope you will claim it on behalf of Maine."

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mrs. Lawrence Goodman entertained the "Thimble" club last Thursday afternoon at her beautiful country home near Kinderhook. Those present were Mrs. Stanley Glick and son, David, Mrs. Will Anderson and children, Virginia, Mary Erma and Allen, Mrs. Nelson Reid, Mrs. John Lanmap, Mrs. John Hoffman and daughter, Helen, Mrs. Margaret Cullums, Mrs. Mabel Westenhaver and daughters, Eleanor and Marjorie, Mrs. Ben Court-right, Mrs. Robert Liston, Mrs. Mary McDill, Mrs. Earl Mossbarger and daughters, Martha and Doris, the hostess and daughters, Mary Belle and Jean Alys. The afternoon was spent in sewing, after which lunch was served, consisting of angel food cake, combination ice and iced tea.

Mr. William C. Hallisy, secretary of the Hooven and Allison company, and Miss Midge McKenzie, welfare nurse of the same company, were married at Holy Trinity church, by Rev. Father Herman Leising in Dayton, Wednesday, June 17. The ceremony was witnessed by friends of the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Hallisy returned to Xenia where they will reside.—Xenia Gazette.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Margaret McKenzie, of Pickaway town ship. Mrs. McKenzie and daughter, Miss Katherine, spent the week in Xenia and were in attendance at the wedding.

INDIAN SUPERSTITION

SAVES A LIFE.

The Indians had a place in what is now Pickaway county to which they brought many of their captives to be punished or put to death, where the spectacles were made entertainment for their people, and to that place after the burning of Colonel Crawford, one of his men who had been captured with the colonel, was brought to be burned. Undoubtedly this man, James Slover, was led thru Franklin county on the way to the "burning ground."

But he was saved by an accident and its effect upon the superstition of his captors. The afternoon when he was to have been thus put to death, when there was a vast concourse of Indians from far around on the hills overlooking the place where Slover was to be burned at the stake, brought a terrible storm accompanied by most unusual thunder and lightning. It was so severe that the Indians feared it was an expression of disapproval from the great spirit, of the proposed proceedings of the afternoon. Something like a referendum was taken as to whether to proceed or not.

The decision was against the captive, but by the time it had been arrived at, evening had come, and the burning was postponed to the next day. That night Slover was placed in a cabin, tied by thongs to a log and guarded by two Indians. Late in the night one of the Indians went to sleep and finally the other one also succumbed to fatigue and Slover took advantage of the situation to slip the thongs from his wrist and neck and got away. Going to the field where the Indians had tethered their horses he picked one that he considered the fleetest and by morning had placed so great a distance between him and his pursuers that he was not overtaken by them and eventually made his way to his home in Virginia.—J. H. Galbraith, blandbdo G h f dorfmbz mbz mbz mb

CASE NOT DECIDED
BY HIGH COURT

Washington, June 19.—Among the important cases left undecided when the U. S. supreme court adjourned for its four-months' summer recess was that involving the question whether Mal Daugherty of Washington C. H., O., can be required to testify before senate investigating committee.

Daugherty, brother of former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, not only refused to testify before the committee headed by Senator Brookhart of Iowa, when it was investigating the Daugherty administration of the department of justice, but he obtained an injunction to examine the records of the bank of which he is president.

Federal Judge Cochran, sitting at Cincinnati, ruled that the senate lacked authority under the constitution and the resolution authorizing the investigation to compel witnesses to testify against their will.

WHITE DIARRHEA.
SAVE THEM

Ashville, Ohio, R. F. D. 1.

May 7, 1924.

Mr. Fickardt:—

I bought 400 chicks. Very soon the chicks began to die of WHITE DIARRHEA. My chicks kept on dying until I had lost 250 in two weeks.

At that time I had ten sick chicks and I really considered them as good as dead. I began to use your remedy with all my chicks, both well and sick. Eight of the sick chicks recovered and I have not lost any others since I began the use of Fickardt's Roup and Cholera Drops over a month ago.

I would have probably thought that disease had run its course, if it had not been for the fact that those that were sick recovered; but seeing the sick ones get well has convinced me that your remedy cured them.

STATE OF OHIO

Now Boasts Around a Million Electricity Users.

Columbus, June 19.—Ohio, forging steadily ahead in the electrical field, has around one million users of electricity furnished by central generating stations.

Statistics compiled by the Ohio Committee on Public Utility Information, from annual reports just issued by the Ohio Public Utilities Commission, show that on the first of this year there were 990,831 homes, commercial establishments and industrial plants using electric light and power in this state. This was an increase of 95,519 over the year before, or a monthly increase of 7060 customers. On the same basis of increase the number of consumers on the first of June would be around 1,030,631 in Ohio.

To meet this demand for increased electrical service, it was necessary to increase the investment in these light and power companies $44,865,056 during the year, bringing the total investment up to $360,508,699.92.

At the same time, these annual reports show, operating expenses were increased $441,926.22. The total operating expenses for the last year was $48,036,018.65. Taxes were increased by $287,751.56. The total amount of taxes paid during the year by these companies was $8,021,735.63. This means that every day in the year, Sundays and holidays included, the electric light and power industry paid more than $2,197 out in taxes.

A compilation of the reports shows a total of 3,473,778,818 kilowatt hours of electricity distributed during the year. This was an increase of 150,211,938 kilowatt hours over the year before.

Although there are 222 electric light and power companies now reporting to the state utilities commission, eleven of them serve more than 50 per cent of the total users. On January 1 of this year these companies reported as follows on consumers:

Cleveland electric Illuminating Co., (Cleveland) 233,055.
Union Gas & Electric Co. (Cincinnati), 107,423.
Ohio Power Co. (Canton, Newark, Steubenville, Fremont, etc.), 93,100.
Toledo-Edison Co. (Toledo), 75,285.
Dayton Power & Light Co. (Dayton), 66,609.
Columbus Railway, Power & Light Co. (Columbus), 65,712.
Ohio Public Service Co. (Lorain, Alliance, Mansfield, Massillon, Elyria, etc.) 59,878.
Northern Ohio Traction & Light Co. (Youngstown), 50,745.
Pennsylvania - Ohio Electric Light Co. (Youngstown), 38,222.
Ohio Edison Co. (Springfield), 19,395.
Ohio Service Co. (Coshocton), 17,508.

Knitted Bracelet Holds Powder Puff.

Since the powder puff has forced itself into the drawing room and on the streets as a legitimate member of Everywoman's outfit, the once boudoir recluse has found a myriad of ways to have itself inconspicuously worn. With the birth of the hand knit handkerchief bracelet, the powder puff has found a new hiding place, for it lies hidden under the knitting and the handkerchief in a pocket in the knitted bracelet. This pocket is in the strip between the two openings through which the handkerchief is drawn.

Child's Play Important

The gamesome humor of children should rather be encouraged, to keep up their spirits and improve their strength and health, than curbed and eschewed.

Grateful for the Handout

By DUFORD PENNE

(Copyright.)

MARY stopped short with a little gasp of surprise and shock. The lounging, ill-dressed, haggard figure on the park bench could be no other than Edwin, whom she had seen the last time three years before. The odd little quiver that her first sight of him used to give her went over her.

"Edwin, is it—" she asked hesitatingly.

"Hello, Mary. It's been many moons since I saw you last, and you suggested it be the last time," he answered a little bitterly.

His words stirred old memories. "Oh, Edwin, those—won't you come with me to lunch? I—I do want to chat with you again," she said hurriedly, feeling within her some old memories stir.

He agreed readily, and her quick mind told her that he was really hungry.

"I'll go, but you must pay the check. I'm clean broke," he said bluntly, joining her.

He was hardly a respectable figure beside her neat and attractive self, and many eyes were turned to them as they went on. But Mary did not care; some of the old happiness returned as she walked beside him.

In a sheltered corner of the restaurant, over a laden table, they finally faced each other.

"I haven't had a square meal in weeks," he admitted with his old frankness. "Now, don't tell me I am wasting my life, as you used to. I'm no good. I admit it."

"No, Edwin, I won't scold now. Then I had such bright hopes for you."

"Now you have given me up. I don't blame you. But I'm grateful for this hand-out."

"Don't," she begged. "I am still—still interested in you. Please be kind. Tell me of yourself."

He laughed harshly, then rapidly sketched his drifting from position to position and always downward. Then, gently, she told of her own work as secretary to one of the city's influential business men.

He listened grimly. "You have been successful enough for both of us."

She saw that her own success seemed to offend him, and she tried to change the subject.

"Now I must go. Mary, I thank you for feeding a beggar by the way—"

"Please, Edwin."

"That's what I am. I don't want to see you pay the check, so I am going. So long."

He went quickly, leaving her almost in tears. He had changed so much, and yet she caught glimpses, faint it is true, of the man she had loved.

She reached for her handbag, which she had hung over the back of her chair. The bag was gone. Her heart seemed to stop beating. Could he have taken the bag? In the confusion in her own mind the truth appeared. He and no other could possibly have taken it.

She waited until the tumult within her had quieted. Then she easily made arrangements to have the lunch charged, and with the world gray about her went back to the office.

In the weeks that grew to months and then to a year the deep wound of his act healed, leaving across her heart only the thin trace of a scar that gave to the outside world no hint of the depth of the wound beneath.

One day Mr. Shively, her employer, turned to her with some papers. "Mary, one of our western men is in the outer office. Please ask him to step in."

She obeyed, and found herself face to face with—Edwin, no longer sloven in appearance nor weak of face. His face was lined, but not with the corroding of dissipation, rather the lines of self-discipline and steadfast purpose.

She stumbled back to her desk and listened to voices that sounded far away as she heard Mr. Shively praise him for his good work and assure him that there was work for him in the East; then she heard Edwin's voice: "May I see Miss Baker, just a moment, Mr. Shively?"

"Sure enough, Marsh. I did not know you were old friends. By the way, visit here in the office. It's about time for my afternoon game of golf anyway."

Mary heard the door close. She heard Edwin approach. Something was laid on her desk and opened. It was her handbag, everything in it intact; and Edwin's voice, full of pain but tinged with some hint of a man who had found himself, spoke gently. "Mary, I stole that, but it has been the making of me. I found in the bag that little photo of myself. It touched me to the very soul; and I made up my mind I would make good or die in the attempt—make good for the sake of the man you might have loved. I have been through hell, but I believe I have come through clean. I joined the western agency, and here I am. The thought of you has been very precious to me through this year of struggle. You will forgive me and not think too hard of me, won't you?"

She turned suddenly, saw the grief in his eyes, brown and luminous with what she knew was love for her; and the next moment her arms were around his neck, and his were about her, while the room seemed to fill with a shining peace and happiness.

Cretonne and Worsted Yarns Combine in Bathing Costumes.

Bare legs may not be exposed by the more deadly sex on beaches where the public gathers. One piece bathing suits may be barred, but so far the censors have not attempted to forbid brilliant colors for beach wear. There may, one day, come a colored Volstead person, but for this season at least we are safe. Color, brilliant color, and still more color, is the rage.

Gay figured cretonne bathing suits are very popular. Small figured designs, large figured designs, elaborate and simple, the cretonne bathing suit makes itself felt. And with this sensible and attractive suit go bathing shoes or slippers to match. One very attractive cretonne model is trimmed with crocheted worsted yarn parrots, which are ap-pliqued to the front and sides. Crocheted parrots on the tip of each shoe bring the costume into harmony.

Towers in Warfare

The tower was used in fortification at a very early period in connection with a wall. One of the earliest instances of this type of fortification was at Nineveh, built more than 2000 B. C. The wall was more than 50 miles long, 120 feet high and had 1,500 towers.

Bird Babies' Photos

Never attempt to photograph bird babies until they are sufficiently sturdy to be taken from the nest without harm, says Nature Magazine. The best time for juvenile portraiture in catbird land is just prior to the breaking of home ties, when the youngsters are fully feathered.

Their Glory Divided

In the governor's garden at Quebec is a granite column bearing the name of Wolfe on one side and that of Montcalm on the other. It is said to be the only instance on this continent of a common monument to the victor and the vanquished.

AMUSEMENTS

An excellent cast of favorite screen players are seen in the new Encore production, "Is Love Everything?" now playing at the Met theater and include such excellent names as Alma Rubens, Frank Mayo, H. B. Garner, Lilyan Tashman and Walter McGrail. Miss Rubens is particularly well cast in the role of the luxuriously raised girl who, for mercenary reasons, is forced to choose a wealthy man for a husband instead of the one she really loves. The husband, played by H. B. Warner, is however, not willing to be merely the owner of a beautiful chattel and, when he discovers that it is only loyalty and not love that she gives in exchange for his wealth and devotion, decides to let her again choose between them. This results in a strikingly original situation and brings about some sensational scenes.

Repeating Slander as Bad as Starting It

Atlanta, Ga.—"Tale bearers are as bad as tale makers," thinks the Georgia Court of Appeals. This statement was made in a decision upholding a judgment in the Stephens Superior court, in which $2,000 was awarded in a suit alleging repetition of slanderous remarks.
The court held that even though the original slander started with a third party and the repeater had accepted the statement in good faith, every repetition was a willful slander.

WOMAN DIP TELLS OF HER THRILLS

Fascinated by Excitement of Going Into Pockets.

New York.—Mrs. Tillie Dorf, Brooklyn, who declares she became a pick-pocket when eight years old, will ask clemency when she goes before Kings County Judge McLaughlin for sentence. She is in the Raymond street jail, having pleaded guilty of picking the pocket of a woman in a Brooklyn department store. She took $10.30 and was caught by a store detective.
At the jail Mrs. Dorf gave an exhibition of her skill by extracting a vanity case from the pocket of a woman reporter.

"I have done that since I was eight years old," Mrs. Dorf said. "I began with relatives, and I have kept it up ever since. It gives me a thrill I can't get in any other way, but thrills don't count in the end. Sometimes I go straight for months. Then my fingers begin to tingle—I want to see if they can do again what they have so often done."

"As I grew older I began to think how many pocketbooks there were in the world, and how easy it would be to open them. I began to operate in cheap stores and on the sidewalks. After my marriage I promised to reform, but I was unable to break myself of my habit. I have no excuse to offer—I just can't help it."

Mundane Fire No Treat to Miss Spore's Spirits

New York.—The familiars of Marian Spore, psychic painter, failed to apprise her that rubbish had begun to smolder in the ground floor hall of the former Delmonico's at Forty-fourth street and Fifth avenue, on the second floor of which Miss Spore has her exhibition.

The apparition that suddenly materialized at the doorway of the studio yelling, "Fire, beat it!" was plain flesh and blood. And it wore spats.

About thirty persons who were watching Miss Spore's methods of painting or staring at her plump and colorful canvases, obeyed the warning promptly, joining the rush on the stairs from a golf school on the third floor, which met at the street level the exodus from a real estate office.

Miss Spore, however, who depends entirely on spiritual guidance, knew better than to flee. She began swathing her paintings in canvas to protect them from smoke, which already was drifting into her studio in ever-thickening waves.

All the time the smoke rolled blacker and denser up the stairs and into Miss Spore's studio. All the time Miss Spore, with never a glance out of window or into the hallway, coolly wrapped up her pictures in canvas. There were 175 of them, and by the time she finished the job the last firemen were picking up their hose. Miss Spore missed the fire completely.

His Teeth in His Lungs Send Man to Hospitals

New York.—Attacked by a violent spell of coughing, Conrad Wimler, 187 Thirty-second street, Brooklyn, swallowed his upper teeth. His wife took him to Norwegian hospital, but physicians there were unable to locate the plate and suggested that Wimler return home until later, when an X-ray could be taken and the teeth removed.
He returned home, but the pain became so intense that his wife took him to the Brooklyn Eye and Ear hospital. Physicians there said the work would require specialists and advised him to go home and wait until 9 o'clock. Wimler did.

At 9 o'clock he again appeared, so weak that he was put to bed while the pulmonary region was X-rayed. Late that night the plate with a full set of teeth was removed by Dr. John Auwerda, fourteen hours after Wimler had swallowed them. Neither the plate nor Wimler's throat were injured.

Woman Tramps Country 2 Years Dressed as Man

St. Louis, Mo.—How a woman has been tramping throughout the country in the guise of a man for two years was revealed here last night when several transients sought shelter at a police station. Close questioning revealed that "he" was Grace Crow, formerly of White Eagle, Okla., who roamed in men's clothing, because it helped her obtain employment. Dressed in an old suit, tattered shirt, worn shoes and cap, and with her hair cut short, she said she had readily passed as a man since the death of her parents several years ago.

What Do You Know About
Sole Leather?

HERE ARE A FEW LEATHER FACTS:

The best leather is tanned Steer Hide.
Steers are raised for their meat—not for their hides.
There is as great a difference in the quality of leather as in the quality of meat.
Good leather always comes from over good meat, and vice versa.
Heavy hides are taken from cattle four years or older.
Most thick leather nowadays is artificially swelled by acid—often sulphuric acid, which rots the fiber, rots the stitching and destroys the wear. The breeding up of cattle by dairymen and the younger kill to supply tender meat, produce the best hide and the best leather, of medium thickness.
Country hides are badly cut in the skinning and are of little value for soled leather.
Most newspaper quotations are on country hides.
Packer Hides are rarely flesh-cut in skinning and, therefore, bring several times the price of country hides.
Hides are always heavily salted to preserve, and are sold salt and all.
The average weight of a green-salted, steer hide is 60 lbs.
To properly tan, it must remain in the tanning liquors from six to nine months.
A 60 lb. green-salted hide will lose 20 lbs. or $\frac{1}{3}$ its green weight in a good, natural, non-acid tannage.
A tanned hide will give four distinct qualities of leather.

DECLARATION SIGNED
BY MEN OF ALL AGES

Few Graybeards Among the Nation's Founders.

Many people think of the signers of the Declaration of Independence as graybeards, old in years, ripe in wisdom and endowed with the vision which decades of experience is supposed to bring. None of the 56 men who finally affixed their signatures to this important declaration, pledging to its support their lives, fortunes and sacred honor, was old enough to be suspected of senility, though a few were so young that they might be liable to a charge of immaturity of judgment.
John Hancock, president of the congress, something of a "blade" and none too conservative in his attitude on some important matters, was only thirty-nine years old when the general congress assembled in Independence hall, Philadelphia, to consider the wording of the historical document. The oldest man in the congress was Benjamin Franklin, who had passed his seventieth birthday only six months before. The youngest was Edward Rutledge of South Carolina, who attained his twenty-seventh birthday in the November following the famous Fourth of July; Thomas Lynch, Jr., of the same state was his senior by only a few months.

Of the whole number but seven had passed their sixtieth year; nine were between fifty and sixty years old, 19 were between forty and fifty, and the same number, 19, were between thirty and forty. The first mentioned were the only ones under thirty years of age. The average age of the members of the general congress was 43.87 years. It has been remarked that there were enough young men to furnish enthusiasm, enough middle-aged men to check indiscreet action and enough well-matured men to balance this most important conference.

The first of the signers to die was Button Gwinnett of Georgia, who lived only until May 27 of the following year. Charles Carroll of Virginia was the longest-lived after that memorable date. He watched the new states grow in power and influence until November 13, 1832; so that some persons still living might have touched a hand which held the pen while signing the Declaration of Independence.

Solemn Tribute Paid
to Old Liberty Bell

"John Marshall, then chief justice of the United States, died in Philadelphia on July 6, 1835," says an old newspaper account. "On July 8, exactly 59 years to the day of the anniversary of the proclamation of the Declaration of Independence to the people, his remains were borne from Philadelphia to his native state, Virginia, for burial. During the funeral solemnities the Liberty bell, while slowly tolling, cracked through its side, forever silenced but not less eloquent in its mute patriotic appeal. It had lived out its life (82 years) of usefulness as men live out their lives. Its active work was done; it had called the people together to preserve their rights under the British crown; it had rung out its clamorous defiance on the great day of the proclamation of the Declaration of their Independence; it had glorified all anniversaries of that Independence. Henceforth, it remains in its ancient place, the silent symbol of not only Liberty throughout all the land, but throughout the world."

GOVERNMENT

Won One Case and Lost One In Teapot Dome Controversy.

Washington, June 19.—(UP.)—As matters now stand, the government has won one case and lost one, in its suits to regain control of naval oil reserves.

The Doheny leases on the California reserves were declared illegal by the California district court. That case now is on appeal. The Teapot Dome case, decided against the government also will be appealed, it was said.

The Mammoth Oil Company lease on Teapot Dome was signed on April 7th, 1922, Secretary of the Navy Denby and Secretary of the Interior Fall both signing for the government.

This contract leased on the reserve, known as Teapot Dome, and comprising 9,321 acres, for a period of twenty years or longer under terms which in effect, made the Mammoth Oil Company the government's agents or instrument for getting oil out of the ground and storing fuel oil for the government along the sea coasts easily accessible to the navy.

Longevity From Sap?

Longevity through the utilization of sap from trees as a food for human beings is the theory of an Oregon scientist, who is investigating whether there is any foundation for a myth that the ancients who lived to a great age drank the sap of trees. Man must be satisfied with a life of seventy or eighty years, while a redwood tree in California, which was a seedling 525 years before Christ, goes on living at 2,500 years of age, he reasoned. If this scientist can find and isolate the long-life substance in the California redwoods, he believes he will have something better than a gland cure for restoring youth and prolonging life, says Capper's Weekly.

IN MEMORIAM

Editor Union-Herald:—Arthur Murielle was born in Hocking county, Ohio, December 7, 1848, and passed out of this life at Wichita, Kansas, May 17, 1925, having attained the age of 76 years, five months and ten days.

In 1886 he came to Comanche county, Kansas, and from there to Barber county where he spent the last thirty-five years of his life.

On October 11, 1883, Mr. Murielle was married to Miss Rose Mettler. To this union four daughters were born; two having preceded the father in death. They were Grace, who died at the age of six months and Mabel, who passed away in 1908, at the age of twenty years. Besides the wife, the deceased is survived by his two daughters, Mrs. Myrtle McKittrick, of Hazelton and Mrs. Opal Schrader of Wichita. A brother and sister also survive. They are Ransford Murielle, of Stoutsville, Ohio, and Mrs. Jane Wyncoop of Delaware, Ohio.

Mr. Murielle was a member of the I. O. O. F. for a number of years and for twenty-seven years was a member of the Church of Christ, formerly a member of the church in Medicine Lodge, later removing to Hazelton, and more recently returning with his membership to Medicine Lodge. As a good citizen, a worthy friend and neighbor, and a Christian gentleman he was ever esteemed and loved by those who knew him.

Funeral services were conducted from the Christian church of Medicine Lodge at 2:30 o'clock Monday, May 13, 1925, in charge of the pastor, Elder E. G. Hanley, assisted by the local I. O. O. F. lodge.

Porcelain Old Product

Porcelain factories and stores were operating in Arabia as long ago as 500 A. D. The Arabian geographer Mohamed-el-Efridi, in 1154, published an account of the town of Ijankoy where "Chinese glass" was made, and added that there was no finer trade than that of potmaker. Certain towns and villages became known for their porcelain and other ceramic products, though the industry was obviously limited to certain towns.

C. A. C. DANCE.

More than three hundred attended the jitney dance at the C. A. C. gym last Saturday night. The splendid seven piece orchestra directed by Dr. Russell Stuckey of Lancaster, furnished excellent music for the dancers. The gym was cool and comfortable made possible by the twelve large electric fans and there was plenty of room on the excellent floor that is always in perfect condition for dancing. Among the guests were noted the returned college students of this and surrounding towns and cities.
